Thousands Of Refugees Flock To West Germany

By Kevin Costelloe
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MARKTREDWITZ, West Germany — Thousands of East Germans poured into this border town Saturday after Czechoslovakia opened the floodgates for refugees who have abandoned hope of a better life in their Communist homeland.

The break came late Friday when it was announced that East German officials had agreed to let allied Czechoslovakia open its western frontier to people pouring in from East Germany.

"The people back there have just given up hope," Olaf Acksteiner, a 27-year-old from Cottbus, told reporters after arriving on the first train carrying refugees from Prague, the Czechoslovak capital.

The mostly young skilled workers continue to leave their country despite the removal of hard-line leader Erich Honecker on Oct. 18 and indications that his replacement, Egon Krenz, is open to reforms.

On Friday, Krenz announced a sweeping program of reform and the resignation of five old guard Politburo members.

Still, as many as 1 million East Germans converged on the capital, East Berlin, on Saturday to demand more freedom. Many carried signs deriding Krenz and the Communist Party, voicing distrust and despair.

Neither Czechoslovak nor East German officials have indicated how long the escape route will remain open.

The refugees arriving here speculated that tens of thousands or more would take advantage of the unprecedented opening to a new life.

One new arrival, Michael Wilke, 27, said he guessed that 2 million of his countrymen would leave through Czechoslovakia by the end of the year.

"The Communist Party is just going to hold onto power," Wilke said. "After 40 years of power, it's not just going to give up right now."

Joachim Doerig, a West German border police official, said he expected about 8,000 East German refugees to reach West Germany over the weekend.

About 70,000 other East Germans have fled West through Hungary, Poland and Czechoslovakia since August, when the reform-minded Hungarian government began dismantling its border barriers with the West.

Together with a record level of legal emigration from East Germany, as many as 190,000 East Germans are expected to arrive in West Germany this year, West Germany's Inter-German Affairs Minister, Dorothee Wilms, predicted Friday in Berlin. The East Germans are given automatic citizenship in West German.

Ms. Wilms' estimate was given before the Czechoslovak border was open.

The latest exodus out of East Germany began Wednesday when Krenz lifted travel restrictions that had prevented citizens from traveling freely to Czechoslovakia. Honecker had imposed the restrictions in October to stop an earlier exodus.

East Germans immediately headed for the West German Embassy in Prague. Until Friday night, they had

PCC Bond Issue On Dec. 12 Ballot

By Charles Hoskinson
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt Community College officials say they hope county voters remember PCC on Dec. 12.

On that day, voters will decide on a $25.7 million bond referendum to raise money for county school construction.

But PCC officials say they want voters to remember that a $10 million bond for construction at the community college is also on the ballot. They say the money is needed if the college is to continue training the county's growing business and industrial work force.

"We have just run out of space here at the college for programs," PCC President Charles Russell said.

Space is so tight that the college has turned away students and delayed the start of new programs designed to meet the needs of local business and industry for trained workers, he said.

"If the county expects to grow economically ... you've got to depend on trained people to fill those jobs," Russell said.

College officials identified $22 million worth of needed improvements for the next eight years in a master building plan approved by the school's board of trustees in December.

Earlier this year, the county Board of Commissioners authorized a $10 million bond referendum to help meet those needs.

The college depends on county money for its building needs, Russell said. More than 75 percent of the college's funding comes from the state, but that money is given to be used for instructional programs, he said.

Who Pays?

Unlike the public school bond, raising $10 million for Pitt Community College could cost county taxpayers money, according to a Pitt official.

Paying the $10 million off over the 15-year life of the bond could require a 3-cent increase in county property taxes unless another source is found for the funds, County Manager Kramer Jackson said.

But Jackson said he expects to find the money.

The public school bond will be paid off from a state trust fund financed from sales-tax revenues, he said. Each year, the county receives a percentage of the sales tax collections from the state to finance school buildings, he said.

That fund currently has enough money to pay off both bonds, Jackson said.

"Initially, the sales tax and the capital outlay fund that the state is holding for every county in North Carolina (will be enough)," he said.

Evans Work Continues

Workers load pipe to be used in the widening of Evans Street in Greenville as the project continues ahead of schedule, according to Wayne Nottingham, resident engineer for the N.C. Department of Transportation. Nottingham said the Evans Street closure near Arlington Boulevard should be reopened for traffic Wednesday. The work is scheduled for completion in September 1990, the spokesman said.

Calif. OKs Sales Tax Hike For Quake Aid

By Steve Lawrence
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — State lawmakers Saturday approved a quarter-percent increase in California's sales tax to raise $800 million for earthquake relief in northern California.

Meeting in a special session, the Assembly voted 56-17 and the Senate 34-2 to approve the proposal over the opposition of some Republicans, who said the money should come from the state's emergency reserve instead of new taxes.

Republican Gov. George Deukmejian said he would sign the bill early next week.

Supporters of the 13-month tax, proposed by Deukmejian, said it was a "compassionate, humane" method of financing earthquake rebuilding.

But William Baker, the GOP leader of the Assembly's fiscal committee, said the increase would "make this tragedy worse by going out and reaching into the pockets of the people of the state of California."

In the upper house, Republican Sen. Don Rogers called the tax plan premature. "Now is not the time to deal with this," he said, adding the money should come instead from the state's billion-dollar emergency reserve.

Other quake-related bills under consideration would earmark money to strengthen roads and bridges,

U.S., Japan Sign Air Service Pact

By David Briscoe
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner announced a pact with Japan Saturday that he said marked the "most dramatic expansion in air service between the two countries" in 37 years.

"It opens new vistas in terms of travel, trade and tourism," Skinner said late Saturday after the agreement was announced in Tokyo.

Skinner said the pact would provide substantial new opportunities for both scheduled and charter passenger and cargo service across the two countries.

Prosperi said U.S. and Japanese officials initialled the agreement after six days of negotiations in Tokyo.

Skinner said the pact would provide substantial new opportunities for both scheduled and charter passenger and cargo service across the

could increase current air service between the United States and Japan by 25 to 30 percent. Six U.S. and three Japanese carriers currently service routes between the two countries.

At least two members of the present City Council will not return to office after the final votes are counted, with one member not seeking re-election and a second official opting to try for the mayoral seat at the governing table.

Greenville could see a change in its top leadership post with first-term incumbent Mayor Ed Carter facing council member Nancy Jenkins.

Five of the six seats on the council are contested — only District 3 incumbent Inez Fridley is running unopposed.

The incumbent said he stands behind a proposal to increase the power in the mayor's office and extend the terms of council members. His challenger said she favors the present system of government.

The first change to the city charter would allow the mayor to vote on all issues before the City Council — the mayor now can only vote to break a tie. The second
